Vol. 3—No. 188 GLENDALE, CALIFORNIA, TUESDAY, AUGUST 7, 1923 THREE CENTS

Our City Comment & discussion by THOMAS D. WATSON

Bootleg Liquor is for the Few; Saloons Were For the Many.

AN argument is being advanced by anti-prohibitionists, as a point against the Volstead law that prohibition does not prohibit and that there is as much liquor to be had today as there was before prohibition. They claim that the only difference is in the price and quality of the liquor being sold.

It is true that prohibition does not keep the confirmed drinker from obtaining his liquor; nothing can stop that but his own will. It does, however, do away with the saloon and the many vices which flourished within its door. The temptation to the coming generation has been removed and the time is not far away when the wet element will accept the situation.

* * *

BEFORE prohibition this same element had no more respect for laws than they have now. The Iowa Mulct law, which was in force before the Volstead act, demonstrated the fact that a saloon could not be run with a profit by closing at a reasonable hour. In other words, the regular run of the business was not a paying end; it did not start to pay until the customers were dazed with liquor and had no knowledge of their acts.

* * *

THE manufacture and sale of liquor will stop the moment the people of America cease looking on the Volstead act as a joke. Just so long as citizens who are law-abiding in other respects continue to wink at the crime of "bootlegging" and patronizing the "bootlegger" will the anti-prohibitionists have hope for a modification or repeal of our present laws. Just so long will decent, law-abiding citizens who realize the misery and suffering that is caused by drink be called on to fight against such repeals.

HYPERION ROAD BRANCH DEPENDS ON ACTION HERE

Whether Glendale is to be included in the proposed new route to the sea from Pasadena, Eagle Rock and the inland cities over Hyperion boulevard is a matter that must be acted upon by the people of this city this week, according to L. T. Rowley, who attended a meeting of the Santa Monica Boulevard Board of Trade held Monday night at Hollywood.

At the meeting a report was given by Mr. Barnes, secretary, on the work on Hyperion boulevard up to the present time, and also regarding storm drains along the line of Santa Monica boulevard. The report outlined the tentative plan as outlined in the Glendale Press on Monday night. Mr. Barnes outlined a suggestion for a cut-off running from Colorado street to Rock Glen avenue, between Eagle Rock and Glendale. If this cut-off, which would be about one block in length, would be adopted it would mean that traffic coming west would be taken over Rock Glen to Maple street and thence to Glendale avenue and south, eventually connecting with Glendale boulevard and from there over the proposed new bridge and viaduct and connect up with Hyperion boulevard, going above the traffic on Riverside drive. The grade will be established over Hyperion and the new bridge will be built at any event, according to Mr. Rowley, who states that already the bridge and highway across the Los Angeles river at that point has been endorsed by all of the civic bodies. The bridge will be at approximately the same point as the present one.

At the meeting Monday night advice was given that the Glendale committee write to the engineer connected with the automobile club and put the matter before him. The sub-committee, including Mr. Barnes and engineers who have been working on the proposed Hyperion boulevard and highway to the beach, are to make their report to the Foothills association this week.

Unless immediate action is taken Glendale would be entirely eliminated from the new route. If the cut-off from Colorado to Rock Glen is secured and adopted it would bring many new people to the city and prove of great advertising value. Mr. Rowley is to make his report on the matter to the Chamber of Commerce of Glendale today.

GLENDALE TO HONOR HARDING

Merchants Favor Closing Up to Noon on Friday

CHURCH SERVICES

Association Discusses Bus Service in City

By W. L. TAYLOR

At its noon luncheon yesterday at the Glen Inn the Merchants association went on record as favoring the closing of all business houses in Glendale Friday morning up to 12 o'clock noon. It was stated that many of the business men did not know the feeling of the association in the matter, and were waiting its action. Funeral services for President Harding will occur during the morning hours and it is hoped that every business house will close. It was stated that the churches will hold special services Friday morning.

The problem of local transportation came up again for discussion when representatives of the Verdugo Hills Transportation company appeared to seek the aid of the association in obtaining a permit to run busses over the city streets. The matter was referred to the executive committee for action. The Verdugo Hills Transportation company already have a franchise into Los Angeles and are at present running stages between Tujunga and Angel City. They hope to be able to give Glendale a local ous system which will bring people from the outlying districts into Glendale.

The merchants' picnic at the Haddock-Nibley Park on Wednesday, August 15, promises to be a humdinger. The various committees having in charge the affair expect to put the picnic over in a manner that will make it the biggest event of the year, if reports are to be relied upon. The mayor has already issued a proclamation asking the merchants of Glendale to close all day on the 15th, and it is likely that most of the stores will close.

Jesse Smith came before the association and outlined the plans recently formulated in Los Angeles for the organization of a Class D Baseball League, which will include Glendale in its territory. The proposition is being promoted by the Athletic League of Los Angeles. Mr. Smith stated that it is the aim of this league to "groom" would-be leaguers who desire to break into the major and minor baseball leagues and that at the present time there is no club or league which can supply this demand. He said that it was the aim of those interested to form a baseball company in the cities interested, that the clubs will train the players and later sell them to the big leagues. Of course those who enter the Class D League will receive a salary, the maximum being $200 a month. The proposition was referred to the executive committee for further action.

W. H. Reeves, city manager, spoke heartily in favor of the baseball movement. He said that it would bring much favorable advertising to Glendale and should be encouraged.

CITY ATTORNEY INSTRUCTED TO AID CITIZENS

The Glendale city council at its meeting Monday night instructed City Attorney Morrow to ascertain what can be done by the council to remove any chance of a repetition of the present situation whereby several hundred residents of Glendale are being sued in connection with the assessments for the improvement of Los Feliz road, and to report his findings at the next meeting of the council.

On motion of Councilman Davis the following resolution was adopted:

"That the city attorney be instructed to investigate and the report to the city council on the ways and means, if any, of avoiding a repetition of the wholesale filing of suits on cash assessments for street improvements similar to those recently filed on the Los Feliz road assessments."

ATTEMPT TO ROB WESTERN AUTO SUPPLY

An attempt was made Monday night to gain entrance to the Western Auto Supply company by unknown parties. The rear window, which had been nailed closed by Mr. Roudebush, was pryed open, but so far as the manager of the store can learn, nothing was taken. The belief is that the thieves were frightened away before they could carry out their intentions.

FUNERAL TRAIN IN PENNSYLVANIA

[By Associated Press]

ON BOARD HARDING'S FUNERAL TRAIN, NEWCASTLE JUNCTION, Pa., Aug. 7.—The State of Pennsylvania, shortly after ten o'clock today, took up the sorrowful task of paying tribute to the memory of the nation's late chief executive.

The funeral train bearing the body of President Harding entered the state near this point and then started across the southwestern corner, passing through Pittsburgh, Connellsville, and a number of smaller towns.

Although far behind its schedule, the train was seen by thousands who lined the route, reverently bowed in honor of the dead and filled with sympathy for the grief-stricken widow.

FAVORITE VERSE IN HARDING SERVICE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7. — The same Biblical verse from the Book of Micah kissed by President Harding when he was inaugurated to the highest office of the land, will be read at his funeral services in the capitol.

It was his favorite quotation. It reads:

"He hath showed thee, oh man, what is good and what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."

MARION, Ohio, Aug. 7.—Without pomp or demonstration except that which comes spontaneously from the people who knew and loved him, Warren G. Harding will be laid at rest in Marion, his home town, Friday afternoon.

Official announcement was made this afternoon of the details of the final funeral ceremonies for President Harding in Marion on Thursday:

The body will be taken to the home of Dr. George T. Harding, the father of President Harding.

Interment will be in the public receiving vault at Marion cemetery—a beautiful park-like place a short distance from the heart of town.

The remains of the late president will lie until Friday afternoon and during part of that time the home will be open to all who wish to pay their last respects to the nation's late chief.

At 3 o'clock Friday afternoon (central time), the last services will be conducted by Rev. George M. Landis, pastor of the Trinity Baptist church.

LEGION SUSPENDS PROGRAM IN HONOR OF HARDING

No Program or Initiations To Be Held Monday

On account of the recent death of the late President Harding, there was no program or initiation at the regular meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary of Glendale Post No. 127, held Monday night at the Legion hall, 610 East Broadway. There was a short business session at which plans were made for a food sale to be held on August 18 to raise money for the grave endownment fund. This fund is to take perpetual care of the graves in France and was started by the national organization. Each state is raising a certain quota. Anyone wishing to make small donations are invited to do so.

There will be a meeting of the County Council on Saturday at Long Beach when plans will be made for the state convention at Eureka the latter part of the month. All of the auxiliary members are asked to remember that there will be reduced rates to the beaches on that day. Reservations for the luncheon on that day should be made with Mrs. Margaret Kaeding.

A short memorial service honoring the late president was held. A poem, "His Monument," written by Myra Nye, was read and the hymn, "Lead Kindly Light" was sung.

ALL CALIFORNIA IS CALLED TO MOURN ON FRIDAY FOR HARDING

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 7.—Governor Richardson today issued a proclamation declaring Friday next a holiday throughout the state, to be observed as a day of "prayer, fasting and mourning" for the late President Harding, "who sacrificed his life in the service of his country."

The proclamation, signed by the governor, follows:

"In order that the people of California may have an opportunity of paying their respect to the memory of the late Warren G. FEDERAL COMMERCIAL AND SAVINGS BANK IS LAUNCHED AT DINNER

Stockholders and Officials Banquet and Discuss Plans and Prospect For the Future of New Financial Institution

NOTE OF UNITY IS SOUNDED

Marco Hellman, Los Angeles Banker, Tells of Old and New Glendale and Warns Against Annexation to His City

By GERTRUDE GIBBS

Significant in its demonstration of modern friendly methods and of the application of community spirit to financial affairs was the dinner given Monday night in the banquet hall of the Citizens' building to stockholders of the new institution, the Federal Commercial & Savings bank of Glendale, which is to open its doors to the business public at 144 North Brand Saturday, August 11, from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m.

At this gathering of leading men and women of the city, covers were laid for about 75 and the plans and aspirations for the newcomer in the business world of Glendale were kept on the high level of service to the community which it could render through the intelligent and public-spirited co-operation of its stockholders and officers. The note constantly sounded was the uniting of Glendalians for Glendale, and the great opportunities offered by the expanding life of the city.

Guests were all ticketed with their names to promote acquaintance, and when the feast was at an end C. C. Cooper, president of the bank, introduced Owen Emery as its attorney and as the toastmaster of the evening. Mr. Emery explained the purpose of the evening to lay the foundation of acquaintance among stockholders and bring them together as a happy family united for a common interest. He mentioned the important function which the stockholder exercises in introducing clients to a bank and thus helping to build up its business.

Marco Hellman, president of the Commercial Trust & Savings Bank of Los Angeles, and vice-president of the Merchants' National of the same city, was a guest of honor and made the chief address, an informal talk in which he reviewed his long acquaintance with Glendale when he helped Capt. Thom and Mr. Childs lay out their tracts in the east part of the city. He asked all present who have been residents of Glendale for over 20 years to raise their hands and only two responded. In an address elsewhere in this issue he warned against annexation to Los Angeles.

Others introduced in a felicitous manner by the toastmaster, who enlivened his task by many apt stories were: L. M. Maynard, well known writer on finance; President Charles C. Cooper, V. M. Hollister, James M. Rhoades, E. U. Emery, Judge Harry W. Chase, A. T. Cowan, B. D. Erwin, W. G. Lauderdale, J. R. Grey, Harry Blumenthal, Mr. Stillman. Mrs. Freeman Kelley and J. T. Fambrough.

Officers and directors of the new bank are:

President, C. C. Cooper.

Vice-president and cashier, Jesse D. Rae.

Assistant cashier, William A. McCormick.

Manager of escrow department, Walter P. Llewellyn.

Directors, C. C. Cooper, E. U. Emery, B. D. Erwin, V. M. Hollister, W. G. Lauderdale, Walter P. Llewellyn, William McMillan and H. S. Webb.

Contributors to the musical program were J. Arthur Meyer, who sang two numbers, and Prof. H. A. Ameraux who played piano selections which were much appreciated.

WESTERN AVENUE GETS ATTENTION

City Engineer Dupuy and Public Service Manager Deiterich were instructed by the Glendale city council Monday night to investigate the existing conditions on Western avenue, and to bring in recommendations as to what can be done to improve the service afforded the residents of that street by the city.

This action was taken as a result of requests of residents of Western avenue that the city carry out the promises made about a year and a half ago.

The members of the council expressed themselves as sympathizing with the residents of that street and as realizing that something should be done.

CENTRALIZE ON JUSTIN P. E. CROSSING

Council Believes Possible to Get One Thoroughfare

Three Means Failure

City Engineer Makes Report on the Chance of Securing Results

The council decided Monday night to centralize on the work of securing a crossing over the Pacific Electric tracks at Justin avenue, rather than to try to get crossings at three intersections in that section at the same time, believing that an effort to secure three crossings is deemed to failure, while the chances of securing a single crossing are bright.

The following letter on this matter from the city engineer was received:

"I am handing you herewith letters from the Glendale Improvement association and the Glendale Chamber of Commerce asking that the matter of obtaining crossings over the Pacific Electric tracks at Ruberta, Justin and Winchester avenues be taken up with the railroad commission.

"We already have an application prepared under your orders for a crossing at Justin avenue and pending the hearing on that crossing, I would not think it advisable to ask for the crossings at Ruberta avenue and Winchester avenue, which are the streets that are only 340 feet from Justin avenue.

"If we are fortunate in securing a crossing at Justin avenue, I think it will be a better time to ask for crossings at Winchester and Ruberta avenues.'"

LOS FELIZ FOLKS UNDECIDED UPON COMPROMISE

Committee on Suits Is Appointed by New Association

At a meeting of the Los Feliz Protective association composed of property owners who are fighting suits instituted against them for the collection of street assessments of which they did not receive notice, which was held Monday morning at Odd Fellows hall, with W. B. Chobe presiding, and Mrs. Rittenhouse recording the minutes as secretary, there was considerable discussion relative to compromise but no decision was reached.

Steddom & Blanchard, who now own the claims, had offered a compromise which would cut down the legal costs about $13 on each claim. The decision was finally left to a committee composed of W. B. Chobe, Attorney Wende, Mrs. Harry A. Terrill, N. L. Dutton and Mrs. Fannie Stone. The committee was to meet this morning to determine what policy to pursue.

The meeting agreed on the proposition that in cases of this kind where a large assessmeht district is made and there are many small assessments, the delinquent claims should not be permitted to fall into the hands of attorneys seeking opportunities to collect attorneys' fees on the many claims, but instead should be taken over by the city and collected with reasonable penalties. The sentiment crystalized in a resolution unanimously adopted which was addressed to the mayor and city council and which read:

"Resolved, that due to the exorbitant amounts added by a Los Angeles bonding company to the original assessment for the street improvement of Los Feliz road, this organization go on record as protesting against such procedure within the city of Glendale because of the undue hardship imposed upon property owners thereby harming the city of Glendale.

"Be it further resolved that the city council instruct the city attorney that such protection could be taken care of when the contract for the improvement is let or when such assessments are released by the city to the bonding company."

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA—Fair tonight and Wednesday, except cloudy early morning near coast; moderate westerly winds.

Foothill Folks Important Meet Set for Tonight

Of unusaul interest will be the meeting of the Foothill Improvement Association to be held tonight at 8:30 at the Grand View school, when answers received to communications the secretary was instructed to send to various organizations concerning various matters, will be read and discussed. They concerned the lighting of North San Fernando road, and also concerned the lowering of Pacific Electric tracks to street level in that part of the city and the opening of more streets across the track for the convenience of school children, and others. The letters were written by Mrs. Buckman and addressed to the Glendale city council and chamber of commerce, the railroad commission, and the civic committee of the chamber of commerce.

It is hoped that members will attend, prepared to take part in the discussion and any action that may follow.

NEW PARKING ORDINANCE SIDETRACKED

Council Decides to Continue Its Discussion Further

MERCHANT PROTESTS

Chief Fraser Explains Need of Some Regulation

The city council decided Monday night to lay the proposed parking ordinance over for further discussion. This action was taken on the protest of J. Herbert Smith, who stated that if this ordinance was passed and cars were not allowed to stop for a few moments in front of his place of business to take on groceries, his trade would be greatly injured.

"This ordinance would practically ruin my business," said Mr. Smith. "I advise my customers to park elsewhere, then, after they have made their purchases at my store to come around on Brand, toot their horns and we carry the groceries out to them. I keep two boys for that purpose. This ordinance would not premit this practice and would work a great hardship to me. I am also speaking for all of the merchants in that block, I believe."

When asked his ideas on the matter, Chief Fraser said:

"The city ordinance states that no one shall park on the street. If a car stops behind the line of cars that are at the curb, whether or not there is anyone in the car, that is called parking. If I allow one person to stop there I will have to allow all the rest to do the same. Before we know it there would be three and even four lines of machines, so that the street would be practically blocked. I see no way of regulating this matter except to keep them all off the streets."

CENTRAL AVE. PETITION IS TURNED BACK

Council Finds Funds Unavailable for Broadway to Riverdale Stretch

NO NEW PAVING

Cost Would Be $2,000 Says City Engineer in Commenting

On account of the inability of the city to put Central avenue between Broadway and Riverdale drive in first class condition, because of lack of funds, the council last night decided to refer the petition for this work, which asked that the city, at its expense, temporarily improve this stretch, back to those presenting it. This action was taken on the recommendation of City Engineer Dupuy, whose letter to the council on this matter was as follows:

"In accordance with my recommendation and your order of July 19, plans and specifications have been prepared for placing gutters six feet in width and grading and oiling a strip eight feet wide on Central avenue from Broadway to Riverdale drive cost to be assessed to the abutting property.

"Under the proceedings as now written, a strip 5600 feet long by eight feet wide will be graded and oiled under the same specifications that was used on South Louise street about one year ago.

"Considerable opposition to this proceeding has already developed and the committee having the matter in charge is of the opinion that the proceeding will be protested out unless the city pays for regrading and oiling this strip eight feet wide on each side of the street. If the city does this work it will cost about $2,000.

"A request has also come to the office that the improvement be extended at least to Windsor road and possibly to San Fernando road.

"The question also arises as to whether it would not be the best policy to pave this strip eight feet in width adjacent to gutters six feet in width with permanent pavement which can be placed on the grade of the permanent pavement for the entire cross section. The cost of permanent pavement, including grading, would be about 28 cents per square foot and the cost of the grading and oiling as proposed would be about four cents per square foot if the city does the work or five cents per square work if included in the improvement proceedings. The question to be settled at this time is whether the city will pay the $2,000 for regrading and oiling the two strips between the gutters and the center of the road.

"Your immediate action is requested as it will be necessary to start these proceedings now if the gutters are put in before the winter rains. I recommend that this matter be referred back to the committee on the improvement of Central avenue."

This New Treatment Never Fails to End Piles

Many sufferers from Piles or Hemorrhoids have become despondent because they have been led to believe that their case was hopeless and that there was nothing in the world to help them.

To these people we say, "Go to your druggist and get an original box of MOAVA SUPPOSITORIES." One of these inserted into the rectum according to directions will be found to give immediate relief. They reach the source of the trouble and by their soothing, healing, antiseptic action first allay the pain and soreness and then by direct contact with the ulcers and piles cause them to heal up and disappear forever.

It's simply wonderful how speedily they act. Blessed relief often comes in two days. Even in cases that have steadily resisted all known treatments, marvelous results have been obtained.—Adv.

LEGION NEWS

For God and Country, we associate ourselves together for the following purposes: To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of Justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrete and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness.—Preamble to the Constitution of the American Legion.

Mr. Keaton, state adjutant of the American Legion, has mailed 300 copies of a letter written by former President Theodore Roosevelt to the American expeditionary forces at the front in 1918, to all Legion posts in California. One of Colonel Roosevelt's old friends and a friend of the American Legion, donated the money to have enough photographed copies of the letter made to give one to each of the 12,000 posts in America. A letter of enclosure was attached to each copy with the earnest request from Department Adjutant Keaton that all posts frame the letter of the former president, and place on display in their club rooms.

The following is a copy of the letter, dated July 17, 1918, from Colonel Roosevelt's office, 347 Madison avenue, New York City:

"To the Soldiers of the American Expeditionary Forces Overseas:

"I send my heartiest greetings to you men at the front. You have made all of us who stay behind lift our heads high with pride by what you are doing. It is you men and only you men, who are doing the one vital work for the American people today.

"All good Americans at this time owe homage to the fighting men at the fighting front.

"What you are doing is vital for the honor and the interest, for the future welfare, and for the very existence of our republic; and you are also battling for the liberty of every well-behaved civilized nation, big or little.

"I congratulate you on the great good fortune that is yours in that you now have the chance to endure hardship and peril for a great ideal and to render to our country the greatest of all services.

"I would give anything to be over with you.

"Faithfully yours,
"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

Seth Millington, department commander of California, American Legion, announces the following important accomplishments for the California department during his term of office, which are to be included in his report at the state convention, to be held in Eureka, August 27 to 30.

The national hospital committee of which Brigadier-General C. E. Sawyer is chairman, has agreed to build two cottage-type tuberculosis hospitals in California; one to be located at Livermore, and the other one in Southern California, at a site to be selected later. The plans for the above institutions were submitted to the committee from the state department of California.

A 400-page report has been compiled by the state department to be presented to the senatorial investigation committee, with recommendations that it is hoped will materially increase the efficiency of the U. S. V. bureau and expedite the proper adjustment of the disabled man's claims.

The state has been completely mobilized for the purpose of properly entertaining the 150,000 visitors expected in San Francisco for the national convention October 15-19. Elaborate plans have been perfected to make this function a tremendous success.

Over fifty posts in the state have built clubhouses the last year and many others are in process of completion. The year has been one of which all the locals have taken a keen and active part in the affairs of the respective local communities, with a decided emphasis of the work of Americanization, which has included the proper celebration of all national holidays, the founding of Boy Scout troops, the naturalization ceremonies, which augments well for the future destiny of our great republic.

THE BULL GETS ACTION IN GLENDALE

Wrestling Committee is Formed in Legion For Hackenschmidt Bout

Already the expected things have happened, since it has become known that Bull Montana seeks to lock elbows and floor the powerful Herman Hackenschmidt at some suitable location in Glendale before an audience of the elite. Men's voices have buzzed, there has been a meeting and a committee to take charge of promotion of the wrestling match between the two set foes has been appointed.

More than once Glendale audiences have registered the thumbs up or thumbs down decision on such things as vaudeville, movies and dog ordinances, and they aren't paralyzed quite yet, so that Bull Montana, who is taking the initiative in seeking the match, need not fear that they will be unable to call forth their mental scales once more at the battle of the two men who both claim to be uncles to Big Brother Sylvest, who, as everyone knows, was 40 feet across the chest.

Well, they would both, one at a time, outweigh the average man in town, and they weigh about the same number of ounces, so that the match will be a matter of putting the shoulder to the other's shoulder and see who can come the nearest to flooring the other one, without doing it. Then when the audience almost thinks there isn't going to be any flooring, one of the heroes will go down and the audience can put thier thumbs in their pockets or inside their kid gloves and go home.

The American Legion post No. 127 of Glendale is forwarding the match. They don't know yet where it is to be given, but there isn't the ghost of a question but what their plans will carry and the match, in all its elements, will be struck.

James S. Whitmeyer has been appointed chairman of the committee. The other members are Charles B. Guthrie, G. L. Kaeding, Chalmers Day, Bill Reeves and Lester Marston.

NEW BARBER SHOP AN INNOVATION

Glendale can boast of a barber shop that is out of the ordinary for a town this size. This particular barber shop is located in the beautiful Jensen building at 133 North Brand, and bids fair to grow at a pace that will make an immediate enlargement of its present quarters almost imperative. Although the Palace Grand Barber Shop does not occupy as much floor space as some of the big shops, it is one of the most complete and up-to-date shops to be found in Southern California.

One of the most sanitary features in barber work has been introduced by the Palace Grand Shop, namely, the supplying of individual combs and brushes for each customer. As fast as the brushes and combs are used they are dumped into a large basket and at night are put through a sterilizing process, which makes them as good as new.

Several expert barbers are employed, and each patron is given special attention. At this time the Palace Grand Barber Shop is making a specialty of ladies' hair bobbing, and for a short time the price has been reduced from 75 cents to 50 cents, in order that the ladies may become acquainted with the Palace Grand Barber Shop. Children's hair cutting is also a specialty of this shop.

If you haven't visited the Palace Grand Barber Shop it will pay you to do so. The latch string is always on the outside.

Personal Service
Will Be Paramount Issue Here

We believe we are humanizing the services of the Federal Commercial and Savings Bank of Glendale to a degree that will be appreciated by the people of this section when it opens its doors for business on August 11th.

Very much more than a mere profit yielding business relation is going to dominate the activities of this institution, for the nearer it can come to being your kind of a bank—indispensable and helpful to you in the highest degree—the nearer it is going to approach the ideals of its directors and officers.

You do not need us to tell you that the opening of a bank is the result of much serious consideration, grave counsel, and prolonged deliberation. The issuance of the State charter under which this bank will operate proves that there is need in this community for the additional services of the Federal Commercial and Savings Bank. The opening of a new bank founded upon high ideals of co-operation and service places another means of progress and development in the hands of the people of this section. Therefore, we say again that the opening of this bank is an event of first importance, so important that you will undoubtedly want to become personally identified with it in some tangible, lasting way.

Recognizing this, we have provided for each First Day Depositor a handsome De Luxe Artpoint silver pencil. The first depositor at the Bank's front doors will receive one of these handsome and useful gifts in gold (one for the first lady and one for the first gentleman) and in further connection with this distinction, it is to be remembered that it is no small honor to be known as the first depositor in a bank.

This bank will be open from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. on Opening Day.

OHIO HONORS HER DEAD IN FUNERAL CAR

Great Crowds View Remains of State's Great Son

WIDOW IS INSISTENT

Schedule is Delayed By Her Desire to Welcome All in Her Sorrow

[By Associated Press]

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 7.—Ohio, where Warren G. Harding was born, grew into manhood, started the political career which carried him to the presidency, and where next Friday he will be consigned to final rest, today found its grief more poignant than at any time since almost unwarned its people heard the news of his passing flashed from San Francisco.

For through the gray morning hours, a funeral train was wending its way slowly through the state carrying its first citizen back to Washington to receive honors such as are accorded only a president.

Hours behind schedule because of the great crowds which sought to pay the last tribute as the cortege silently slipped onward and because of the insistence of Mrs. Harding that travel be slow enough to permit all who had gathered to view the flower bedecked coffin in its dimly lighted car, the train was greeted by throngs at every station and way place.

From Hicksville, the first Ohio village encountered after the train crossed the Indiana line shortly after midnight, to Youngstown, where it again departed from the state and slipped on into Pennsylvania, people gathered by the thousands to stand bareheaded in their grief until the last coach was out of sight.

Many, basing their preparations upon the original schedule which called for an arrival in Ohio early in the evening, kept the vigil for hours, refusing to leave until the cortege arrived. Railroad stations in the cities and towns were jammed from early evening in some cases until long after midnight, while in larger cities surging crowds burst through police lines and forced through trains to slow down as they passed onward. Almost every cross road had its string of automobiles, the occupants of which snatched what sleep they could in their cars while they anxiously awaited the passing of their dead president.

At no place was their a demonstration of any sort, the crowds contenting themselves with a brief glance at the death-bearing coach and then turning homeward as if for the first time coming to the full realization of their loss.

Exchange Club To Honor Nation's Dead

At the meeting of the Exchange club to be held Wednesday noon at the Tuesday Afternoon clubhouse, a program in memory of President Warren G. Harding will be given and will include vocal numbers by Henry Cantor, the well known singer.

FOOTAGE OF ROOM MEANS WORK FOR YOUR FEET

Some fiend for statistics has figured out that the aggregate weight strain on a pair of feet every day reaches the staggering total of eighty tons.

And if you want to disregard statistics and ask the wife for an estimate at the end of a hard day she might be inclined to guess it totals eight hundred tons. And while her figures would be faulty, her idea would be close to facts. The constant pound, pound, pound of continued walking and the back breaking strain of "being on my feet all day" constitute a real problem for the home-keeper.

Common sense is the bridge over the chasm of needless wear and tear on the human body through excessive walking and standing. Expansive kitchens have lost their popularity along with high ceilings. Close, compact rooms that assure maximum convenience are not a fad. They have won general preference because they help materially to solve the problem of needless walking. Saving thousands of steps for the house wife hasn't the semblance of a fad. It savors of sound sense. It explains the wholesome demand for smaller, better arranged, less expensive dwellings.

The demand for compact and efficiently arranged small homes stands out like a high peak on the building landscape. The practical and whole-hearted way in which architects and contractors have co-operated so that demand may be fully satisfied is only another example of the progress which the building profession and trade is making.

An interesting example of a four-room home that has all the advantages of a compact and modern apartment may be seen at the office of the Bentley Lumber company, situated at 460 West Los Feliz road, says Donald R. Gillin, service manager. A knowledge of woman's work and the things she seeks in her work shop—the home, is evident in the planning of this splendid little home, concludes Mr. Gillin.

HEART OF WETONA IS REVIVAL OF BIG DRAMA

When Joseph M. Schenck selected "The Heart of Wetona" as a vehicle for beautiful Norma Talmadge he conferred a real boon on all true devotees of the motion picture, while his casting of Thomas Meighan in the leading male role was a master stroke. This famous play which George Scarborough wrote for David Belasco and which proved to be one of that great impresario's most notable successes, did much to bring fame to its stage star, Lenore Ulric.

The Selznick Pictures Corporation has just revived this picture and presented it at the Glendale theatre, closing tonight.

The story centers about Wetona, a half Indian girl, who falls in love with Anthony Wells (Gladden James), a good-for-nothing boy, who wrongs the innocent little Indian girl. Quannah, Wetona's father, and chief of a tribe of Comanches, learns that Wetona is not the virtuous girl he has always supposed her to be. She refuses to tell him the name of her lover. All she will tell him is that he is a white man.

John Hardin (Thomas Meighan), the agent in charge of the reservation, is suspected by Quannah as being the man who wronged Wetona. Hardin loves Wetona but has kept it a secret. When accused he decides the only way to save Wetona is to marry her. He marries her and she is ousted from the tribe. The Indians, seeking vengeance, try to kill Hardin. Wells is shot by Quannah and Wetona awakens to the realization that it is Hardin she really loves.

Sydney A. Franklin, who directed "Smilin' Through" and "East Is West," helped to make this an almost flawless production.

WE WOMEN

By BETTY BRAINERD

THE MAN OF IT

Some interesting statistics come out of London. According to the Home Department, more than 3,000 women cancelled their marriage licenses in London last year. This, a statistician of the department says, is a record. Additional and equally horrid details of the matter are that in most cases the license had been paid for and preparations made for the wedding. Only in twenty-six cases was it the groom who changed his mind. The most frequent explanation was incompatibility of temperament.

It is generally regarded as an inalienable right of a woman to change her mind. I see no reason why we should apologize for the habit. It is, of course, better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all. It is much worse to take out a license to wed and marry a man with whom happiness is a remote probability. Marriage should not be a gamble. As a matter of fact, most divorces are the result of marriages entered into by people who didn't know each other perfectly before they were married. By changing our minds we avoid mistakes. Moreover, the fact that so many licenses were cancelled in London is a circumstance for which I think the grooms-to-be were mostly responsible. We do not change our minds unless we have a reason. In the case of the London women who cancelled their licenses I imagine the men provided adequate justification.

I have an idea that the women who cancelled their licenses will not regret the step. No woman who fears she will be a spinster would do such a thing. Those who entertain such a fear would take a chance on the man and go through with the ceremony. Those who don't probably possess an attraction which will express itself sooner or later on the altar anyhow.

The fact that so many women changed their minds is not to their discredit. It seems to me that the statistics, rather, are an indictment of the parties of the second part.

'ALICE ADAMS' IS SUCCESS AT THE GATEWAY

The coveted honor of winning the Pulitzer prize has twice fallen to Booth Tarkington. In 1919 his "The Magnificent Ambersons" was considered the best novel of the year, and in 1922 "Alice Adams" won the prize.

Miss Florence Vidor now interprets "Alice Adams" on the screen, and it has already been declared to be as great a photodramatic triumph as Mr. Tarkington's novel was a literary achievement. Rowland V. Lee adapted "Alice Adams" to the screen and also directed it. The supporting cast includes Vernon Steel, Claude Gillingwater, Gertrude Astor, Harold Goodwin, Margaret McWade and others. "Alice Adams" is an Encore Picture released by Associated Exhibitors and is the feature attraction at the Gateway theater tonight.

HOOSIERS HAVE THEIR TURN IN CONTEST

Sunday, August 5, was Hoosier day in Central Christian Bible school. Only 13 native-born Hoosiers were present, as compared with 28 Missourians the Sunday previous, but there were more than 20 who had lived some part of their lives in Indiana. A beautiful banner had been prepared for the occasion by Mrs. Fitch and each Hoosier wore a pink carnation, the state flower. One verse and the chorus of Paul Dressler's "On the Banks of the Wabash, Far Away" were sung, and Mrs. J. H. Daugherty gave a highly interesting reading: "Ain't God Good to Indiana?" Rev. Cole's sermon at the morning worship hour was on "Dedicating a Life."

Classified Is Fixed Wealth

If all the dollars invested in Glendale real estate and business were piled in one heap—how high do you think that heap would be?

Of course, it would be impossible to perform such a feat, but it is possible to view most of these dollars in their integral shape of fixed values.

The classified department of any newspaper is an exposition of the invested wealth of any community, being converted through its pages, back to liquid, cash and assets, into silver and greenbacks.

The Glendale Daily Press, in these classified columns, indexes these assets. A capitulation of the value of each lot, of each house, and of each business would be an astonishing exposition of the turning of money into property and of the returning of property back into currency.

How many houses valued at $5,000 do you see offered for sale? How many at $10,000? How many lots? How many business for sale? Not less than half a million dollars' worth of property is offered every day in the Glendale Daily Press to those who would convert their ready cash into fixed assets in property. Possibly much more is offered. This does not mean that there is a bear market in real estate. It does mean that distress or ambition has knocked on the doors of the owners of these properties. The knock that means distress to one individual is echoed by the rap of opportunity on another's door.

When one must sell, it means turning fixed assets into liquid assets. Glendale may lose one citizen, while it gains another in the buyer. There is just so much property for sale.

The study of this changing current of currency from fixed to liquid wealth is the study of values that is making wealth and has made wealth for speculators and investors for income.

It is a study which is open to all who seek a better investment of ready cash; for those who seek to make their dollars work to the last degree of energy.

Human life and progress today is so constituted that 50 per cent of profit by one man is made on the other man's misfortune. There is no loss without a gain to some one.

Study the classified columns until you get the angle and see only the investment opportunities for you presented in each offering. Then you will understand why the classified advertisement is the real news of the growth of Glendale, the record of the letting go because of many things, and the seizing of opportunity at the right moment. Between the two lies profit in Glendale.

SEEKS QUEER ANNULMENT

OAKLAND, Calif., Aug. 6 (U. P.)—Harry Leas, 21, has filed suit in the courts here for annulment of an unusual wedding in which he was the leading figure—the groom. He says the ceremony was performed under a state law of California, which is little known of, that a couple who have lived together as man and wife can be married by a minister without a license.

Leas was married under this law, but declares he was under age, being but 20 at the time, and so the wedding was illegal, as he did not have his parents' consent.

EXTRA SESSION IS DISCUSSED BY COOLIDGE

Apparently Undecided on Need for Meeting of Congress

[By Associated Press]

WASHINGTON, August 6.—President Coolidge apparently has no present intention of calling an extra session of congress, but those who called on him today received the impression that he had not made a final decision.

The possibility of an extra session was discussed by the president with Samuel Gompers, president and Frank Morrison, secretary, of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Gompers said the president appeared to have no intention of calling congress together ahead of time, but was reserving any definite decision.

The subject was brought up by Mr. Gompers because of his desire to submit legislative proposals on behalf of organized labor. He made an engagement to see President Coolidge early next month to submit labor policies which are to be discussed at a meeting this month of the federation's executive council. The labor leaders spent more than half an hour with the president in a discussion of industrial matters. The situation in the coal industry was taken up, but without mention of any threatened strike.

HIGH LIGHTS OF SPEAKERS AT THE NEW BANK BANQUET

By GERTRUDE GIBBS

The personal participation of stockholders and officers of the new Federal Commercial and Savings Bank at the program of speeches which followed the dinner to stockholders Monday night, made it an occasion of unusual interest and the spirit manifested and optimism expressed are an assurance of the community backing of this new institution.

Other speakers introduced in a felicitous manner by the toastmaster who enlivened his task with many apt stories, were:

L. M. Maynard, a well known financial writer, who talked on the value of the stockholders' co-operation.

C. C. Cooper voiced his pleasure in the occasion and its promise of assistance in making the bank a success. He asked for constructive criticism and said: "No big battle was ever won by the officers alone. It takes co-operation to make an effective army. We will consider ourselves an army.

Jesse V. Rea, cashier, expressed his confidence in the great future of Glendale and the success of the bank.

A. T. Cowan dwelt on the assistance a bank could afford young men who had accumulated a lot of small debts by loaning them the money to pay them, thus saving them and their creditors embarrassment.

Val Hollister gave assurance that the new bank would not be a "one man institution," expressing his pleasure in having a "little stake" in it.

"Jim" Rhoades urged women stockholders and wives of stockholders to exert their influence on behalf of the bank.

E. U. Emery declared the support which had rallied to the new bank had surpassed his expectations and made him very confident for its future, that it was a pleasure to be connected with a bank owned and controlled by Glendalians.

Judge Harry W. Chase predicted success and commented on the growth of the city and the impossibility of any longer being personally acquainted with all its citizens because they are coming so fast.

Mr. B. D. Erwin of the Imperial Valley, said his heart and soul were with the new bank.

W. G. Lauderdale declared one of the best assets of the bank is the friendly advice and help of a man of the caliber of Marco Hellman.

J. R. Gray indorsed Mr. Cowan's suggestions and said in his opinion a bank should be a place where you can get money when you need it.

Harry Blumenthal wished the bank success and promised to do all in his power to promote that success.

Mr. Stillman, a new comer from Iowa, said he was invariably embarrassed in the presence of bankers from that state as one always needed mittens and ear muffs, and he also said he came to Glendale in part because it had so many good looking women.

Mrs. Freeman Kelley was impressed by the fact that so many of the younger men and women were evidently stockholders and interested in the enterprise.

J. T. Fambrough said he had lived here eleven years, seen the town grow, and was pleased to know we have room for another bank.

NEW BOOTLEG CONTAINER

PENDLETON, Ore., Aug. 6 (U. P.).—Sheriff's deputies are displaying a new style in booze containers, presumably used by some local dry law violator in dispensing refreshments.

The apparatus consists of a copper tank about an inch thick, curved to fasten close to the body under the clothing. A rubber tube connected with the tank, the officers figure, ran down the sleeve of the bootlegger, and ended in the palm of the hand.

Under pretext of shaking hands, or talking, the little act of draining out a drink or so would be comparatively simple, it is pointed out.

MARCO HELLMAN WARNS AGAINST ANNEXATION

Tells New Bank Officers, "Don't Lose Your Identity"

By GERTRUDE GIBBS

Marco Hellman, the well known banker of Los Angeles, who was the guest of honor and chief speaker at the dinner for stockholders of the new Federal Commercial & Savings Bank which is opening its doors to the public Saturday night, quoted some facts and figures concerning Glendale which he said had astonished him and which he believed would be of interest to Glendalians.

Of the power of the press he said:

"The growth of a community is measured by what the newspapers do for you. If the people here are a class of people who do things for themselves, that makes news the papers are glad to print and creates a feeling that brings other people."

The fact that the University of California, southern branch, has not room enough where it is, was mentioned by Mr. Hellman with the suggestion that Glendale endeavor to make a place for it and secure the great advantage of being a university town.

Most emphatically Mr. Hellman advised against foreign entanglements, saying: "Do not lose your identity. Much as I love Los Angeles and its institutions, the moment you join Los Angeles you lose your identity. Eagle Rock has lost it."

In presenting the facts and figures referred to by Mr. Hellman, he said:

"The remarkable growth of Glendale, which strikingly illustrates the opportunity open to the homeseeker and investor in this section of Southern California, has no parallel, as far as records show, anywhere in the country. And as a reflection of what is possible in community development when backed by co-operative measures and progressive public spirit, it speaks volumes for those who have been identified with Glendale's astonishing progress.

"It is a fact borne out by U. S. government records that in percentage of increase in population Glendale leads America in communities of its class. In the decade which ended with 1920, Los Angeles gained nearly 100 per cent in population, while Glendale gained almost 400 per cent. This is more astonishing when it is realized that in 1887 Glendale experienced its first real estate "Boom." This was the outgrowth of the establishment of its first so-called "motor railroad" (as the newspapers of that day described it) connection with Los Angeles. Glendale in that day did its banking business through Los Angeles, and its population was not above 1,200. Today it has more than 5,000 attractive homes, occupied largely by their owners; its banks number ten, with approximate resources of $80,000,000, and its population is around 35,000. There is ample ground for the belief that by 1926 Glendale will have 50,000 residents.

"Moreover, in the light of the building construction now going on, it is easy to foresee even greater changes in the physical progress of Glendale in the next ten years. Records show that the community's building permits for 1921 reached a total of $5,099,201, and throughout the following year permits were issued at the rate of approximately $400,000 a month. In the first ten weeks of 1922 construction permits amounted to $918,122. This included business structures and homes of a character to make Glendale notable in Southern California.

"Inasmuch as Glendale's growth in the future is bound to be influenced by the progress of Los Angeles, it is perhaps well to refer to certain phases of the development which have given Los Angeles an outstanding position among American municipalities. Virtually all the growth of the communities immediately surrounding Los Angeles will be represented in the overflow from the larger city. Los Angeles' industrial, commercial and harbor expansion will compel this suburban growth.

"Ten years ago Los Angeles was given, in the U. S. Census reports, a population of approximately 500,000. Today it is nearing the 1,000,000 mark, with more than 800,000 residents actually accounted for. Ten years ago its output of industrial products amounted to about $15,000,000. In 1922 this output had grown to about $850,000,000. A decade back its wage-earners totaled only about 120,000. This army has since grown to more than 260,000. The weekly payroll herein 1919 amounted to $2,747,501. In 1920 it had increased to $4,216,715 weekly, and today it is estimated as around $6,000,000 weekly.

"Los Angeles harbor growth is as vital to the progress and prosperity of Glendale and other nearby cities, for the local port is really the key to our future expansion From a so-called "mud flat" in 1908 to the busiest inter-coastal shipping port in the United States is the history of the Los Angeles harbor in a nutshell. U. S. Shipping Board figures show that more freight, destined for other American ports left Los Angeles in the last three months of 1922 than from any other harbor. Last year 9,000,000 tons of freight were handled at the wharves of the Los Angeles harbor. Where in 1909 not a single vessel in international service left with a cargo from this port, today we have forty-two steamship lines having vessels in overseas service.

"Another significant reason for the growth and continued prosperity of Los Angeles and its surrounding territory is that within fifty miles of this city is produced annually more than one-sixth of the nation's crude oil supply—and oil is vital to the world's business. This oil production and its various bi-products was valued at approximately $250,000,000 in 1922.

"The summarized facts about this amazing community, the growth of which represents the greatest story of progress in American history, are as follows:

"Third among American cities in building permits this year, exceeding a valuation of $108,000,000 during the fiscal year ended June, 1923.

"Factories now in operation number 4,150; invested in industrial plants, approximately $600,000,000; bank clearings in 1922 totaled $5,152,000,000; bank resources, approximately $650,000,000, as compared with $487,567,000 a year ago; export trade in 1922, approximately $30,000,000; internal revenue collections in 1922, approximately $60,202,000; public school enrollment, 1922, more than 160,000 pupils."

than two years. After her temporary retirement from the screen she starred on the stage in "Twin Beds," "Fair and Warmer" and "Cornered." The Paramount picture, "The Purple Highway," which will be the feature at the T. D. & L. theatre Wednesday, is Miss Kennedy's first motion picture vehicle since that time.

This production, it is stated, cost in excess of $225,000. A practically all-star cast, including Monte Blue, Vincent Coleman, Pedro de Cordoba and others, supports the star. Henry Kolker directed and Rufus Steele wrote the scenario from the stage success, "Dear Me."

The hired man was tinkering around the farm yard. The patent churn man gave him a cheap cigar, and asked him how things were coming along.

"Different times," growled the hired man; "different times."

"What's the trouble?" asked the churn agent.

"I used to enjoy giving an apple to a horse."

"And now?"

"Well, I suppose the tractor is glad to see the oil can, but it never whinnies with joy."

UNION PRINTERS PREPARE FOR CONVENTION

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 7.—Preparations for the convention of the International Typographical Union to be held here the week of Aug. 13, have been completed and the local union committee is anticipating a gathering of more than 4,000 persons, including many printers who are not delegates.

Among the chief topics for discussion at the business sessions of the convention will be the 44-hour-week strike in commercial printing shops in the United States and Canada. The strike has been in progress for more than two years and more than $15,000,000 in strike benefits has been collected and disbursed. The strike is continuing in a few important jurisdictions.

The city, county and the three newspapers of Atlanta have contributed generously to the convention fund and an elaborate program of entertainment has been provided. Sessions will be held in the municipal auditorium. In a sub-hall of the building manufacturers of printing machinery and material will hold an exposition.

Included in the entertainment program are automobile trips to many points of interest, barbecues, watermelon fiestas, dancing and theater parties. Saturday night before the convention a roof garden party will be given for the early arrivals. Members of the local committee promise an "etaoin shrdlu" of a time for the printers on that occasion.

ROCKEFELLER TRAINS NURSE FOR POLAND

Sent to this country as one of four war workers under the American Red Cross in Poland selected for an American training in public health nursing, through scholarships of the Rockefeller Foundation, Miss Sophie Komorska has just sailed for France, where she will spend several months in training with an American unit before returning to Warsaw to begin her career as a hospital field worker among her own country people.

She was graduated this spring from the Training School for Nurses of Lakeside hospital, Cleveland, Ohio, and her student training has included also field work in public health nursing in connection with the Mansfield, Ohio, child health demonstration which is being financed by the American Red Cross and directed by the American Child Health association, a national organization working to improve methods and standards of health care for children throughout the country.

Miss Komorska, through her American work, has become especially interested in health work for children, and it is her hope to organize child welfare units in Warsaw for work along the lines of health education for children developed here by the American Child Health association, which aims not only to establish health habits among children through nutritional and other special preventive and remedial work, but also to relate fundamental training in health practices to the routine curriculum of the schools.

She has also been asked to become a teacher in a new training school for nurses established in Warsaw under the auspices of the University of Warsaw and financed by the American Red Cross. Two of the other Polish scholarship students trained in this country have already assumed positions in this school, which is training Polish nurses by American methods for public health work. The fourth is still in training in this country.

PRUNES IN TOBACCO JUICE

OLYMPIA, Wash., Aug. 7 (U. P.)—Washington prunes will take the place of Southern molasses as a flavoring for chewing tobacco in at least one big cut plug plant.

One car of prunes has already been shipped for this purpose, with 25 more to follow. After extensive tests, the prune juice flavor is said to give the leaf a delicate taste all its own, which is expected to popularize "squirtin'" tobacco more than ever.

If a man is unable to sell or give a thing away he proceeds to raffle it off.

THUNDER MAY MARK THE MIDNIGHT RECEPTION OF FUNERAL TRAIN AT CAPITAL

Delayed Cortege of Bier Cannot Reach Capital on Schedule; Weather Bureau Forecast is Stormy Night

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—(United Press) The body of President Harding will arrive here on the transcontinental funeral train tonight in cloudy weather and probably a thunderstorm, the United States weather bureau predicted. Tonight and Wednesday will be cloudy with local thunderstorms probable, the bureau stated.

BALTIMORE, Md., August 7. The Harding funeral train will not reach Washington much before midnight at its present rate of progress, in the opinion of operation officials in charge here. This belief was based on the assumption that in deference to the wishes of Mrs. Harding the train would continue to run slowly through communities desiring to pay their tribute to the memory of the dead president.

Reports were received at the general offices of a tremendous outpouring of people along the line of the road in western Pennsylvania, slowing the pace of the train.

WASHINGTON, August 7.—A city of mourning awaited today to pay supreme tribute at the bier of Warren G. Harding before his body is taken to lie forever in the Ohio soil among the kinfolk and neigabors he loved and who loved him so well. Not for the greatness of his place in life, but for the generous heart so suddenly stilled in death.

Hours before the long special train with its freight of sadness was due, the folk of Washington, high and low, had begun to gather along the way to the White House. Reports of the train's delay had not altered the plan of thousands here to be in their places early. Steel cables that but a short time ago held back rollicking thousands gathered for a Shriners' conclave in which the president played so large a part, again girded Pennsylvania avenue, this time to edge the ranks of silent humanity waiting patiently through the summer heat to catch a glimpse of the casket and cavalry escort.

There were no ceremonies planned aside from the brief military honors at the station and again at the White House.

At the entrance to the station the Marine Band was to play. The casket was to be carried out and lifted with gentle hands to a black wheeled gun limber.

President Coolidge and the few cabinet members in Washington upon whom has fallen the sad duty of planning the honors to be paid in the name of a hundred million Americans to the fallen chieftain, have arranged their program in order to be at the station only a short time before the funeral train appears. They planned to assemble in the president's waiting room, designed especially for the happy events of the nation's life, for the welcoming of new presidents and of honored guests of the nation.

By that route came many great men to Washington in the years. Then came the men of place and power in Europe during the war to consult as to America's part in that great adventure; thus Pershing came to receive the thanks and plaudits of a great nation; then came Harding himself only two short years ago, walking strongly, his wide shoulders erect, his face lifted, his eyes alight, showing the thoughtful resolve to spare himself nothing of his best endeavor in the nation's service.

That service was given lavishly; so lavishly that death swept down with terrible suddenness to check him in full course and turn him back to come again to Washington through the president's room, but this time sleeping in a flag-draped casket, freed forever from the cares of the great office that sapped his life away.

Before, when Harding came to claim the post his countrymen had given him cheers and shouts greeted him as he stepped out under the arched entrance of the president's room to see the wide-flung plaza packed with happy people waving him friendly acclaim. A little beyond towered the grey dome of the capitol where he had sat through contented years as senator, with flags streaming from the staffs on senate and house wings. Off to the west, beyond the crowding buildings was the White House, the door to the great labors he was to know.

Today flags were at half mast from the triple staffs that front the great station building and from the roof of the silent beyond, in preparation for his return.

He was to come back and receive the honors such as only dead presidents may know and to spend a night of peace and utter rest, at last in the dim stately setting of the east room of the White House.

A cavalry escort from Fort Meyer was under orders today to form a line at the station before the train came and to wait until the casket is delivered into the keening of the comrades of the dead commander-in-chief to be carried in the White House as fallen soldiers are carried. A battery of gold guns was polished, every link and buckle of the horses' trappings for the occasion. It will await at the station. No pains have been spared that each man and animal may do honor to the dead in his appearance. Blooded mounts of officers and rangy horses of gun teams have all been carefully groomed.

The men themselves were ordered to wear olive drab with tan brimmed caps to cover their eyes and chin straps. At each officer's sword hilt was to rest a cluster of crepe that will stay there a month in token of the nation's loss. The colors were to bear long streamers of black. President Coolidge and the cabinet members were to take their places within the station to greet the train out in the long shed. The great concourse, with its high glass roof, was to be swept clear of all out the official group and those immediately connected with the sorrowful functions. The great terminal and the miles of trackage was expected to stretch empty and silent to await the funeral train.

The funeral program called for no ceremonies of greeting at the train or elsewhere except for the strains of the band and the salute of the troops outside. There was to be just the slow walk behind the casket down the silent concourse and out through the president's room to the awaiting gun carriage. Arrangement had been made to spare Mrs. Harding all this and a closed car will hurry her by a different route to the White House in order that she may be there when the casket is carried into its first night of quiet since it started from San Francisco.

Two troops of cavalry were ordered to lead the way from the station, swinging off at a quick trot for the swift journey to the capitol grounds, then down around the peace monument to Pennsylvania and on to the treasury and finally through the shaded grounds of the executive mansion.

The funeral caisson, drawn by four black horses, was alloted the next place in line, close on the heels of the troopers.

Then was to follow the long string of motor cars being President Harding's traveling party to the sad conclusion of its long journey; then others to carry President Coolidge and official Washington. Beside these were to be arrayed the third troop of cavalry and rumbling guns of the artillery were to bring up the rear of the escort.

At the White House, orders to the troopers directed that they swing aside to line up along the broad avenue and sit silently with sabres at "present" as the caisson passed and followed by the motor cars, turn in through the gates to stop before the wide door of the mansion. Not until the casket vanishes through that door will the steel flash down to be sheathed and the troopers ride away to prepare for the greater ceremony tomorrow.

The official party was to break up at the White House, those who made the fateful journey with President Harding going to their homes only to re-assemble at the train tomorrow evening and be with him to the last, when the casket is lowered to its final resting place in the quiet cemetery at Marion. For tonight it will lie at the White House, untroubled by the pomp and circumstances of the nation's woe and with only the sorrowing widow and close friends to watch through the long hours until the nation again claims its great dead.

MARION, OHIO, TO RECEIVE FORM OF LOVED SON

Widow of Nation Wishes Home Folks to Officiate There

TEMPORARY WHITE HOUSE, Aug. 7.—The body of President Harding will be surrendered by the nation to his fellow townsmen after the state ceremonies here tomorrow.

President Coolidge today, after a conference with Senator Lodge, issued a statement declaring that in compliance with the wishes of Mrs. Harding, the official groups who go to Marion for the interment ceremonies, will go only as guests of the town.

It was explained by Col. Sherill, military aide to the president, that Mrs. Harding had made it plain that she does not desire any military, fraternal, civic or official participation in the Marion ceremonies, it being her wish that her husband be interred as "the most distinguished representative of Marion."

The guard of honor, composed of high generals and admirals, which will escort the body here, will journey to Marion as the guests of Marion and as representatives of the army and navy, surrendering their function as guard of honor.

BIER TO AWAIT MAUSOLEUM ERECTION

MARION, O., Aug. 7.—(By the Associated Press) President Harding will not be buried beside his mother and sister in the Marion cemetery. His body, after the funeral services here Friday afternoon, will be placed in the receiving vault at the cemetery and held there pending the erection of a mausoleum here to receive it.

CAT SHOW PLANS ARE PREPARED

Plans for the annual cat show were discussed at the regular meeting of the Glendale Cat club, held Monday night at the home of the president, Dr. Libbie Ashcroft, 1159 Melrose avenue. It was decided to send east for 100 wire cages for the next show, which will be held early in December. The entire evening was given over to the discussion of show plans and arrangements.

The following cat show officers were chosen: Dr. Libbie Ashcroft, general manager; Mrs. B. O. Holbrook, business manager; Mrs. Fred Hendrickson, treasurer; Mrs. Brasher and Mrs. Maude Burnford, show secretaries.

Miss Clarabel Grim was elected corresponding secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mrs. F. S. Card. The names of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rich were accepted for membership. Miss Mary De Witt read a group of original poems written for the occasion.

Refreshments and a social hour followed the business session. The next regular meeting will be held the first Monday in September.

Truths in Epigram

Honesty is faith applied to worldly things. —Irving.

A BIG NEIGHBOR'S WELFARE

The cities and towns grouped around Los Angeles necessarily maintain intimate relationships with the metropolis. They share the pride in its growth that is felt by actual residents. In some sense they feel that their own property is the result of conditions proclaimed by the development of Los Angeles. Assuredly, as part of the same community, they have a right to be concerned as to the moral status of their big neighbor; even to offer counsel when the neighbor seems to err.

Crime has prevailed in Los Angeles to an extent not to be endured. Citizens formed a committee to ascertain the reasons, to aid the police in the enforcement of the law, and to bring about such reform as possible. They soon found the trouble to be that control of the police department was not in the hands of police officials, but rested solely with a coterie of politicians. The police force had been made into a political machine to serve personal ends. Perhaps the citizens of Los Angeles do not have the necessary perspective. The truth, as it appears from a distance and to the unbiased view, might interest them. It seems to be about like this:

Chief of Police Oaks, apparently earnest, apparently honest and devoted to his task, found that he was without authority. Other chiefs before him had reached similar dilemma. They had quit in disgust, or been dismissed. Oaks was different stuff. He appealed to the public to back him, and the public was ready. The crime commission was behind him quickly. Thus encouraged, Oaks discharged one of the leading politicians of the force, an officer who had been taking orders from the dominant clique. This was regarded as an excellent beginning. The discharged officer appealed, as was his right. Before the hearing could be had, Mayor Cryer curtly discharged the chief. Oaks resumed his rating as a subordinate. As an ex-chief he would have been of comparatively little use as a witness. He would have known that whatever he might say in exposure of evil practices, would react upon himself, ending in loss of his job completely. Naturally his enthusiasm ebbed at this response to his endeavor to give Los Angeles a real police department. The attitude of the mayor must have intimidated or entirely subdued other witnesses. The attempt to bring about reform was killed by the deliberate action of the mayor. If the people of Los Angeles will stand for that, they will stand for anything.

Meanwhile the getting of a new chief from another town might have been a salutary move, through eliminating the police elements that are at war. It is stated, however, that the men sent to consult with the prospective chief, were precisely the men whose orders the mayor is supposed to have been taking, who are believed to have caused the investigation to end in fiasco, and whose influence is regarded as the malign incubus that weights down the police establishment, rendering it almost useless except to these secret bosses. If this be the case, and Cryer continues ostensibly to be mayor, the new chief might as well have stayed away. He is undone in advance. The effort to bring about reform was deliberately thwarted. Other essays, under present conditions, would be futile. The one chance for betterment lies in kicking out all the rogues, from highest to lowest.

At least so it appears to the friendly neighborhood that has been watching the spectacle, hoping that honest men were about to be given a chance, and a great city to have effective protection.

NO CASE FOR SYMPATHY

A boy arrested at Riverisde in December, 1922, for reckless driving, was penalized by the juvenile court, being forbidden to drive a car for one year. The same lad has just been arrested again, this time on the charge that he drove through Ontario at night without lights, with muffler open, and at the speed of fifty miles an hour. At the time of the first arrest he said he became 17 years old January 19, 1922. Now the claim is set up that he will not be 18 until January, 1924. Thus he hopes to take chances once more in the juvenile court, where crime sometimes passes as a prank.

This offender does not need to be considered as an individual but as a type. The type is vicious and dangerous, or it is mentally lacking and equally dangerous. No matter what the age of an offender, if he has not sense enough, or character enough, to refrain from infesting the highways as a menace and a pest, the sooner he shall be subjected to restrictive discipline, the better. Any court inspired by the idea of protecting the public through discouraging the activity of criminals, would be likely to realize the undesirability of having one of the type loosed on society. If a juvenile court would be less severe, it is to be hoped that the juvenile court shall decline to consider the offender as a roguish kid. His case does not call for sympathy.

FROM VICE PRESIDENT TO PRESIDENT

Six times now has the death of a President elevated the vice president to the executive chair. Several of these instances are within easy memory of the mature. In one case only has the vice president after serving the portion of the term remaining, been elected as the head of the ticket, the exception being that of Roosevelt.

Before the time of Roosevelt, Presidents Tyler, Pierce, Johnson and Arthur each had finished out a term to which another had been elected. Not one of these has been rated as a great statesman. Indeed, they were mostly rather commonplace. None was called upon to identify himself with any large feat of development or diplomacy that caused him especially to be remembered. None had to meet the sort of crisis that brought out to the utmost, qualities of fineness or firmness that he may have possessed. Johnson admittedly, never was fit for high station. When his name is mentioned it recalls the period of blundering reconstruction, and the fact that he narrowly escaped impeachment.

President Arthur was a tactful gentleman. If his administration lacked high lights, at least it was civil and serene, and dignified enough. He had been a practical politician with a New York city environment. Garfield was a comparatively robust man, in the prime of life. There could scarcely have been a thought that his associate was to outlive him, murder being an equation never definitely considered.

As to Roosevelt, his unique career, his strong personality, the world knows, and of Coolidge it will learn soon. Much is expected of President Coolidge. He had not by chance been given his place on the ticket with Harding, but with the thought that a vice president ought to be of caliber able to succeed the President were the necessity to arise.

A fashion note says that ladies are to carry walking sticks. There could not be the slightest objection, if they wanted to carry them. As ornaments there might be some difference of opinion, but as protection against such annoying creatures as dogs and mashers, they might be effective. By the way, fashion notes have been making that prediction for years.

CAN YOU MAKE IT GO?

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

A curious suicide occurred in New York recently, though the facts as related in the papers looked prosaic enough:

Estelle Lawton Lindsey

A man of 80 jumped off one of the piers and so gave up this life, its vanities and its pains. Were I 80 I know that I should wish to do the same thing. The curious item is that the man who jumped did not wish to do so. He jumped because life had beaten him and it had taken him 80 years to realize that sooner or later life beats us all, himself included.

The story came to me from the man who, of all people knew the suicide best.

"I met him 30 years ago," he explained. "He was 50 and I a callow boy of 20 just beginning to win my chance on the stage. I liked the old bird—for 50 is always old to 20—but I thought he was a little touched even then. You see he was a widower and he tried to marry a girl out of my set. I liked the girl and so I said, as a kid will:

"See here, uncle, I like you all right, but that girl's too young for you. See?"

"But my dear boy, I'm not old. I'll never grow old. Look at my muscles, at my walk, at my eyes. It's a gift from the gods, this physique. He touched me on the shoulder confidentially and whispered:

"I'm a reincarnation of Mahomet; and you know his virility. You can't understand what it is to feel the pulse of youth forever beating in your veins. I am a fit companion for any girl in the twenties, you watch and see."

"And I did watch. The years hovered over this man as if afraid to touch him, and by and by I came to think that he really believed in what he said. As he advanced in years he laid in a supply of splendid clothes and toupees—he had a dozen at least and was forever adding to the list.

"Two years ago I saw him, still upright, still eager, still confident, planning again to wed a girl of 20.

"She laughed at him and when the poor old idiot pressed his suit she told him how he looked to her—took him to the mirror and indicated all the signs of decay that his vanity and pride had denied.

"'You can't make it go,' she mocked. 'You can't make it go. Life works a certain way and that way ultimately brings all men to where you are. You have lived and lived and lived. I, too, want to live—make way for me to do it. Youth has always the right of way.'

"Cruel? No, I do not think so; it's never cruel to wake a sleeper. The point is, my old friend was more than a sleeper; he was a man who has figured to beat time. It can't be done.

"He went home that night and realized his folly. The 12 toupees, all orderly in his dressing table drawer, the modist costumes, the self delusion, even the well-exercised muscles were powerless to stay the hand of time enough to blind the eyes of youth. He knew it at last and that night he walked out, dressed immaculately, and jumped off the pier. But he left behind a note addressed to me and it said:

"'Good bye. I couldn't make it go.'"

Can you?

Perhaps your delusion is a bit different from his, but if it is a delusion, against it are time and tide, tradition and opinion, the sweep of the spheres themselves and you can't make it go.

THE RIGHT WORD

VALUABLE SUGGESTIONS

(Find the error in this article)

When you say you want a thing badly, you mean that you want that thing very much. Badly is the wrong word.

Do not say, "I loaned him five dollars." The right word is lent. Say, "I will lend (not loan); I have lent (not loaned); I want to lend (not loan.) Loan is a noun and should be used as follows: He was made a loan this afternoon; This loan will save his business.

Do not say, "I claim that we ought to postpone the meeting." The right word is think or maintain. Claim means to demand as due. So one should say, "He asserted that too much time had been consumed," not, "claimed that too much time had been consumed." Claimed is heard every day in colloquial speech, but the words, asserted, maintained, averred, affirmed, are to be preferred.

Data should be pronounced so that the first a is as e in prey (not as a in art). Futhermore, one should say, "The data are prepared," not, "The data is prepared:" Some people claim that is or has is correct with data, but they are wrong.

JAMES W. FOLEY

Something more than high respect.
Something more than fulsome praise.
Something more than due honor.
Something more than plaudit and acclaim.
Something more than anything else in the world.
And that is the love of his fellow countrymen.

* * *

That is the greatest gift that can be given.
For it is the gift of human nature.
Not the gift of any high authority.
Not the gift of boards or trustees or governments or institutions.
It is a gift that comes without volition.
The spontaneous gift of a people.
The expression of the love in their hearts.

* * *

Tears do not flow for majesty.
Or for power.
Or for authority.
Or for dignity.
Or for knowledge.
Or for anything in the world but love.

* * *

Lincoln had that.
The love of a great people.
He had it not for his statecraft.
Not for his eminence.
Not for his power or authority or achievements.
He had it because of the broad and deep and gentle humanity in him.

* * *

It was that humanity that could caress a child, sign a pardon, rebuke a laggard and write a Gettysburg address.

That was the marvel of humanity in Lincoln.

And an abundance of that same humanity had the late President.

And it earned him the love of his countrymen.

* * *

He was not majestic.
He was not austere.
He was not given to an excess of dignity.
He was not cold.
He was not bubbling or effervescent.
He was tender.
He was human.
He was kindly.
In his life there were few if any angry words from him in time of stress or trial.

* * *

Three years ago he was comparatively little known outside of the state in which he lived, the community where he had worked and the senate where he served.

In the brief time since then he has come to be known and beloved of the whole people of the United States.

Those who opposed him as a matter of politics could not fail to like him personally.

He was genuine.
Sound.
Thoughtful and sympathetic and human.

* * *

That is what earned him the love of his countrymen.

That is what brought tears to the eyes of men to whose eyes tears have long been strangers.

That is what brought expressions of affection and sympathy from near and far.

Expressions more than formal.
Expressions more than diplomatic.
Expressions more than conventional.

* * *

He had and deserved the love of his countrymen.

No richer gift could have been his.
No finer epitaph could be written.
For he genuinely loved his fellow men.

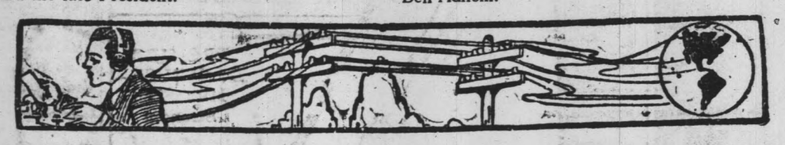
His is the epitaph that was craved by Abou Ben Adhem.



Songs of the Poets

Unity—By Alfred Noyes

Heart of my heart, the world is young:
Love lies hidden in every rose!
Every song that the skylark sung
Once, we thought, must come to a close:
Now we know the spirit of song,
Song that is merged in the chant of the whole,
Hand in hand as we wander along,
What should we doubt of the years that roll?

Heart of my heart, we cannot die!
Love triumphant in flower and tree,
Every life that laughs at the sky
Tells us nothing can cease to be;
One, we are one with a song today,
One with the clover that scents the world,
One with the Unknown, far away,
One with the stars, when earth grows old.

Heart of my heart, we are one with the wind,
One with the clouds that are whirled o'er the lea,
One in many, O broken and blind,
One as the waves are at one with the sea!
Ay! when life seems scattered apart,
Darkens, ends, as a tale that is told,
One, we are one, O heart of my heart,
One, still one, while the world grows old.

THE TRAGEDY OF SHYNESS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

IF NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE were alive there is a novel I would like to have him write. He had the genius for describing the overdevolpment of some one trait of character that had become morbidly super-intense, until it twisted and colored, deformed and transformed the whole man. He thus depicted the overactive Conscience, in The Scarlet Letter. I would like to have him take up the overactive sense of Modesty.

He could thus show us the timid, shrinking boy, full of love, life and companionship, but too keenly sensitive; so that little by little he is alienated from all his playmates, draws apart from his brothers and sisters, and even from his mother.

No one understands what the difficulty is. He is miscalled selfish, egotistic, misanthropic. He is none of the three. He is very unselfish, the opposite of egotistic, for he despises himself, and loves his fellow beings passionately. The secret is that his spiritual skin is so thin that human contact of any kind is an exquisite torment.

His early life would thus be traced, until the climax comes. He falls in love with an estimable girl, who, however, has the womanly knack of liberal criticism. He pours out to her all the pent up reserves of his nature, unfolds in a passion of confession all the inner life that has so long been hidden. She takes it all quite as a matter of course. She sets him down as a very "peculiar" man and tries to get him to fall in line with the rest of humanity.

His struggles to retain his love and to endure the torment of their relationship, increase in complexity and intensity, until at last the high-strung silver cord snaps, the too thin golden bowl is broken, and he goes mad.

There is many an offense that we attribute to wrong motives which is really attributable to shyness only. The reason why that boy spoke as he did was not that he did not respect you, and not that he wanted to insult you; he was simply shy, embarrassed and awkward.

As a rule a shy person has great depth of sentiment and strong emotion. It is worth while to cultivate him and to know him. He may make an excellent companion and a loyal friend. And very often the one who is bold and sophisticated and full of self-assurance is shallow and insincere.

To see a shy nature, a diffident and reserved soul, melt under the kindly warmth of appreciation and become free and candid and expansive is like watching a beautiful flower open into bloom.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

TWELVE-HOUR DAY DOOMED

[The Continent]

Steelmasters report that the twelve-hour day in the steel works cannot be abolished. But it is most interesting to observe that everybody who comments on their report—preachers, economists, social workers, daily newspaper editors and even the bosses in the steel mills themselves—assume that in spite of all the reports that any sort of committee may bring in, the twelve-hour day in the steel industry and in every other is certain to disappear.

As conditions of steel manufacture are better understood, the public appreciates that the twelve-hour day can't be said to overwork men so terribly; the labor is not continuous. But the same advance of popular understanding makes it more and more evident that the social results of the twelve-hour day are impossible. The essential objection is not that twelve hours is too long to be in the mills, but that it is much too long for a husband and father to be away from home; much too long to allow a worker a just portion of his day for the duties of his citizenship, for self-improvement for recreation.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

A President of the United States deserves a protection that there seems to be difficulty in providing. It is natural enough for him to desire to see the country, and talk with the people. Roosevelt had the physical strength for this sort of thing. The average man who has reached the sixties, a point likely to have been touched by a man in the presidency, lacks such strength.

HENRY JAMES.

If a President were permitted to go about in the comfort now afforded by modern facilities; to follow his own wholly impromptu program, stopping at will, loafing along, all might be well with him. Let him not be mauled by crowds and hampered by dinner engagements. A vacation that involves greater hardships than the most arduous routine toil, is worse than no vacation. It made a cripple of one President. Now it has killed another. Probably it even overtaxed the virile Roosevelt, for he passed away at a time when a decade of usefulness seemed to be in prospect.

The country asks too much of its presidents. They have to bother with petty details as well as with affairs of moment. They get no rest. Their attempted spells of leisure are crammed with a devastating activity. It isn't fair.

* * *

It is impossible not to feel a little sorry for August Vollmer of Berkeley if he hasn't kept a pretty strong grip on his job up there.

Mr. Vollmer has come to Los Angeles to be chief of police. The small fry politicians decline to permit any man to be chief of police. They are it, themselves. If these chaps seem to tolerate Vollmer, their friendship puts him under a hopeless handicap. If they decline to tolerate him, he'll have to go, and the public seems helpless in either case.

* * *

The theory that a child should not be punished, and that a parent is cruel and unjust in shaking an admonitory finger, and saying "Don't" is showing results now. It has been in practice so long that the child is grown up. The police are looking after it now.

* * *

Fifty years ago the children of the day read a story which one of them remembers yet. It told of a mother, grateful for the recovery of her baby, and anxious to do something gracious for the doctor in lieu of the regular fee. So she proffered him a silken purse of her own knitting. He remarked thoughtfully that $100 was due. The lady opened the purse, took out a $100 bill, and giving it to him, showed four other bills of the same denomination still reposing there, thrust the rejected gift into her work basket, and the incident was closed.

Now the story is afloat again. The purse has changed to a cigar case. The $100 bills have become 1000-franc notes, the scene shifted to Paris. Thus the mutations of the years. But the lie remains the same.

* * *

Few men have lived to see their sons elected to the presidency of the United States. Dr. Harding had great joy in the success of his son, and doubtless the blow to the aged sire was bitter, when the son was called.

President Coolidge took the oath of office as administered by his father. Another proud and happy father. Yet in his moment of exaltation, likely the elder Coolidge had a thought that went out tenderly to the aged man bowed in grief in the home of the Hardings.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

A LINE A DAY

An old gentleman, honored by all of us who have the privilege of knowing him, told us that the best part of his education had come through the "line a day" his mother had made him learn from the time he could speak until he entered college.

"I used to think it was a terrible task and do everything I could to get out of it, but as I grew older it came easier and by the time I was through high school it was a habit that I could not ignore. And useful. For I found that I knew all sorts of lines from all sorts of writings and that they were constantly coming to my mind to help me supply a background or to illumine a thought or to classify and measure one.

"Although I started with a line a day it soon grew to more, and I learned whole psalms and poems, and bits of essays that I liked. They are all precious now.

"The psalms were songs to me and I found them easy to learn, and rich in meaning. 'Lift up your heads, O ye gate!' That would make a tired soul rise again, now wouldn't it? And the ninety-first—'He shall cover thee with His feathers'—just full of such lines. Wonderful poetry of the spirit. You ought to know it!

"I learned Stevenson's prayer. He wrote many prayers, but I chose this one for mine. The one beginning, 'The day returns and brings its irritating round of concerns and duties'! Finest prayer for a boy!

"In high school I learned Shelley's 'Cloud' and while I have learned much and thought much, and studied a great deal about the moon, I never learned anything that thrilled me more than those lines beginning, 'That orbed maiden with white fire laden'. Beautiful, isn't it?

"I used to like to thrust my right hand into my bosom and recite, 'At midnight in his guarded tent'. Like to do it even now. There's a fine swing to the lines.

"I learned lines from Emerson's Essays, Lincoln's speeches and Talmadge's sermons. I was stocked up with lines of good words. I have used them and profited by them all my life."

Isn't it a good thing for children to memorize good words? In this day of my writings, so much that is trifling and of the moment, isn't it a good thing to point their attention toward something that has endured and that bids fair to endure for at least their lifetime?

When it is easy (as it is for children) to memorize the fine parts of English literature, isn't it a good thing to have them do so? To pick out bits for them and help them see the beauties in them and listen to them recite them? 'Twould seem so to me.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

It's funny—odd, I mean—how we fool ourselves sometimes. I know a man who firmly believes that his success in life has been due to his luck in seizing the psychological moment.

"Any one," he says earnestly, "could have done the right thing. There was nothing else to do. It was as plain as a pikestaff. But I came along and did it at the right time. That's how I happened to have this success you speak of."

That is a lovable folly on his part, due to his incurable modesty. The truth is, of course, that when he was given a job he became an enthusiast. As a kid he was put in charge of the stables on a ditch camp out west. The tired old horses that had been dragging scrapers around suddenly found that some one was interested in them.

They were watered regularly and plentifully. They were fed well and cleaned off and bedded. The roughnecks grumbled at this unusual spate of duty until the evangelist found he had to whip several of them. In his religious fervor he equalized the odds between his youth and slenderness and their heavily tonned maturity by using a pick-handle. The boss of the camp discovered and promoted him. But he thinks his promotion was due to the fact that he hit a roughneck at the psychological moment.

He is now at the head of his line. He thinks he is lucky. He does not realize that his life has been jammed with psychological moments. Any one who watched him even a little could not miss seeing a p. m. occasionally. He has worked at every job as though he loved it. He is the sort of a man who goes out walking with his wife on Sunday and always walks toward the job. Just to see how it is getting along.

Of course, he had a fund of common sense along with his enthusiasm. The combination always means success.

Building and Mortgage Loans

— vs. —

Other Investments

It has recently been established by carefully compiled statistics [illegible] from all sections of the country, that mortgage loans and real [illegible] the most stable, conservative and best income-paying investme[illegible]

The committee appointed to investigate building loa[illegible] housing conditions advised with 1500 bond and mortgage companies, and they established by detailed figures that the real estate mortgage loans yield about 20% higher income than investments in bonds and other staple securities. The fact that 49% of the entire assets of savings banks are so invested proves conclusively the soundness of this, the best of investments.

It is interesting to note another report, which states that real estate loans are the best investments to be found, pays higher interest rates, with absolute security for the principal, that this fact is attracting money from other forms of investments into the first mortgage.

Building Loans and Trust Deeds—while the latter has always been considered the hardest to place, Trust Deeds pay a higher rate of interest, and, as they usually recite monthly payments and to include interest, the principal gradually is being reduced while the security becomes more valuable; and this not only because of the fact that the size of the loan is being reduced, but because of improvements the home owner will make on the home and grounds, and the continuous increase in the value of the land as the new improvements go up.

The wonder is that money for first mortgages, trust deeds and building loans is not a drug on the market—the only plausible reason is the desire in the minds of so many for speculative investments—those that are tinged with prospective enormous returns—self-styled "Get Rich Quick" on small investments. There is no such thing for the man or woman of average means; speculative investments are only for those who can afford to take a chance, that in case the principal is lost it will not deprive them of any of the necessities of life. Why take a chance when such wonderful opportunities are available in real estate and building investments, which have the indorsement of your business firms, bankers, etc.?

When you consider the United States is in dire need of homes, more than we can possibly build in the next ten years, this, coupled with the growing desire for home ownership and ready market at attractive interest rates for money with which to build homes, you are assured of the perpetual returns with the principal carefully safeguarded, and the best investment you can find and make.

Baseball to Soothe Radicals of Yucatan

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Mexican property owners in the Yucatan district are now organizing to oppose the increase of socialistic tendencies in the population there by instituting baseball teams. The idea is said to be that of giving the youths of the province some ideas about play and physical self-development.

As a first move, according to reports to the United States commerce department, the Socialist Resistance league, which is the organization promoting the effort, has bought 250 complete baseball outfits from the United States. In addition, a physical culture director has been sent to the United States to learn about the game as it is played, and booklets of rules and descriptions about it have been printed in Spanish.

Yucatan, from the beginning of Mexican troubles, has evinced constant symptoms of radical political activity.

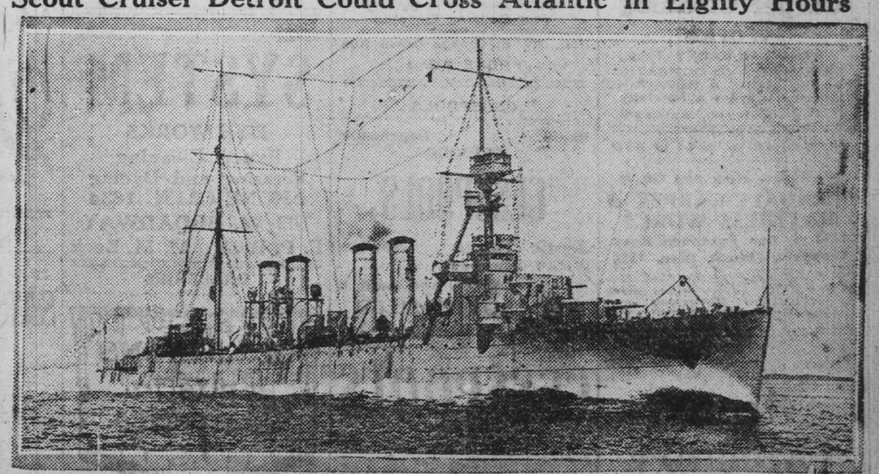
"Hummingbird" Plane Designed for Use of U. S. Submarines

This "mechanical hummingbird," built entirely of metal except for the covering, is intended for use on board the submarines of the United States navy. It is only 16 feet long and 18 feet wide. When assembled it can be stowed compactly on board an underseas craft. The plane, built by the Martin company, was tested recently at Cleveland, O., at which time the above photograph was made.

Scout Cruiser Detroit Could Cross Atlantic in Eighty Hours



The U. S. scout cruiser Detroit is the fastest vessel in the world with the exception of destroyers, having attained a speed of 35.95 knots, or approximately 41 land miles, an hour. At this speed it would take only 80 hours to make the voyage from Liverpool to New York, as compared to the 120 hours required by the fastest liner. The Detroit has developed 97,375 horsepower during trials.

DREAM CITY IS NOW A REALITY

LONGVIEW, Wash., Aug. 7.—Standing here on a vast plain, which just a year ago was wooded country and farm land, are several imposing brick and concrete buildings, the first evidences of the realization of a matter-of-fact modern "dream" of a model city. A six-story fireproof hotel, with every appointment that a luxury-loving traveler could expect; a department store, covering about half a city block with a plate glass arcade along its entire front and its show windows displaying the latest modes in women's apparel; a large bank building rapidly nearing completion; a building under construction to house a daily newspaper which has for some months been established in a temporary structure—these are some of the tangible achievements of Longview.

Streets, laid out after the plan of Washington, D. C., are rapidly being paved and sidewalks are being put in. Already roses are blooming in parked spaces. Taxicabs are running on the newly paved thoroughfares. An imposing hotel bus, the like of which is seen only in metropolitan cities, is making trips between the hotel and railroad station in the adjoining city of Kelso. Train service direct into Longview is promised in the near future.

Away from the center of the city, a couple of miles or more, work has been started on a huge mill, which inside a year is expected to turn out lumber at a rate of 500,000,000 feet annually. Adjacent to the mill a large colony of neat houses built in various designs, with various colored paint, is now ready for the occupancy of the 4000 workmen who are to be employed in the mill.

This is the city that was formally dedicated recently. Hundreds of visitors came from nearby states and communities, and there were official delegations and representatives of financial concerns from far cities. The dedication festivities reached a climax two days later at a banquet at which more than 350 persons were served at the hotel Monticello.

That Longview came into being as an afterthought was the explanation given by Robert A. Long, chairman of the board of directors of the Long-Bell Lumber company, in his dedicatory address. He said that his company, which has been operating in southwestern states, was transferring its operations to the Pacific Northwest because of the depletion of the timber in the south and southwest. New timber holdings, adjacent to the Columbia river, were obtained, and the next step was to select a site for the mill, and the confluence of the Cowlitz and the Columbia was chosen.

Decision to build a model city, rother than permit the erection of a ramshackle one was reached, and experts were called in to do the building and planning. Mr. Long introduced each of these to the assembled guests. As soon as the essential construction is finished the city is to be incorporated and turned over to the inhabitants. He disclaimed intention of making it a "company" city.

Gov. Louis F. Hart of Washington gave the enterprise his enthusiastic endorsement. Mayor George L. Baker of Portland, Mayor Edwin J. Brown of Seattle, George S. Long of Tacoma, Edgar B. Piper, editor of the Portland Oregonian; Wood Beal, Chicago timber operator; Col. Roland G. Hartley, Everett lumberman; the Rev. Dr. R. H. Miller of Kansas City, and R. A. Booth of Eugene, Ore., also spoke in praise of the work done and the plans for the future.

SORROW

For that he was so kind I know the flowers
Are blooming sweeter where he lies at rest.
For that he soothed a grief in shadowed hours
I know his sleep with quietude is blessed.
For that he smiled, I know his soul is smiling,
For that he kept the faith, the way is clear,
For that he loved the world, sunbeams are whiling
About the grass and birds are singing here.

For that he hoped, new buds above are springing,
And blossoms burst with color o'er the mound
For that he sang, the birds about are winging,
And there is a full chorus of sweet sound.
For that his soul was sweet the fragrance coming
From these gay flowers is rarer, sweeter still.
And crickets chirp about and bees are humming
And jewels glitter where the sunbeams

For that it grieves the willow bends above him,
As though to leave upon his cheek a kiss;
The flowers hide the mound for that they love him
And ask no higher privilege than this.
For that they weep, the gentle raindrops falling
Drip from the flower and hedge and from the tree,
And a soft mourning dove is calling, calling,
Alone and lonely, like the heart of me.

THOMAS HULL HAS INTERESTING RELIC

Thomas L. Hull of 328 West Colorado street is the owner of a mahogany cane that has a very interesting historical record. When Moro castle was captured during the Spanish-American war the old Spanish guns were replaced by more modern ones. Mr. Hull's son Lee Hull, who, during his service in the army was at Cuba, secured a mahogany strip from the carriage of one of the guns, from which the cane was made. The Spanish history of the gun is that it was placed in the castle in the year 1500.

FINE BOXING IS CARDED BY ELKS

Topnotchers From Hollywood and Vernon Engaged

A boxing bout which promises to be even more thrilling than the last one put on at the Elks' Club House, has been arranged for next Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock.

The events will be put on by top notchers from Hollywood and Vernon, the talent engaged including: Frank E. Novey and Ted Levin, 116 pounds; Joe Layman and Louis Garcia, 135 pounds; Paul Wilkin and Eddie Herman, 128 pounds; Joe Gomez and Frankie Conroy, 135 pounds; Young Farrell and Sammy Berger, 122 pounds.

The proceeds will be a benefit for the Elks Band. All Elks are requested to turn out and bring their friends that there may be as large an attendance as at the last bout.

All seats that are to be reserved will be reserved Thursday as there will be plenty of ushers to place the holders of reserved seats.

Dan Tobey, announcer for Hollywood and Vernon, who is internationally known, having served in the Olympic contests abroad, will be on hand to announce the events and Harry McCartney will act as referee. Ray Galvin is chairman of the jinks committee and will be assisted by Mr. McCartney.

IS TOMBOY GIRL BECOMING RARE?

Is the day of the tomboy among girls passing? Have modern ideas stepped in to claim the girl between 8 and 12 who formerly played leapfrog, took her turn at bat at the ball game and even fought with the boys if the occasion demanded?

This might be judged so from a letter to the American Child Health association, of which Herbert Hoover is president, from a seventh grade school girl of Trenton, N. J., which says: "A lot of girls in our class put on rouge and powder, but I neither one, because it makes you uglier than ever."

This youthful writer prefers to court beauty through observance of the rules for insuring good health. "I am trying to do what your books tell me to do," she says, referring to the association's literature which urges the eating of wholesome food and green vegetables as precursors for good health and in turn good complexion. She asked for more health literature and says health is a regular study in her class now, even for the girls who "rouge and powder."

LEMONADE SPOONS USED AS STRAWS

Some of the shops show a great variety of lemonade spoons of glass. Many of them have hollow handles, so that they serve the purposes of the humbler straw of soda-fountain fame. Many of them have bowls of brilliant glass—fiery red, jade green, orange, bright blue or purple. Either in sets all in one color or in sets containing all the colors, these spoons are an attractive addition to the summer refreshment tray.
